Strategic Rationale

Architecture_MPS aims to establish an innovative academic online forum which combines, for the first time, a double-blind peer-reviewed academic journal with a collection of resource material related to the journal content. In this regard it represents a new approach to facilitating cross-disciplinary collaborations in academic institutions both nationally and internationally.

It was launched in February 2013. Materials will be added continually in order to build up an extensive information source for archiving.

Aims

- To support one hosted research project through the collation of a specific website index and research guide.
- To support general research into the subject fields covered by the journal through an up-to-date listing of relevant material and reviews updated frequently.
- To facilitate debates and the dissemination of good practice in library and information science.
- To foment greater collaboration between researchers and information professionals to facilitate more effective research outputs.

Information Services (IS) Committee & Research Team

Architecture_MPS is a non-profit initiative that aims to facilitate collaborations between researchers and information professionals. It has two divsions:

The Information Services (IS) Committee oversees the Resource Repository which aims to facilitate and promote collaborative research between academics and information professionals through the publication of relevant materials.

The Research Support Team is responsible for the daily administration and management of the journal's research activities and support for researchers and academics.

Architecture_MPS is currently seeking to expand its committee of librarian and information professionals and, in addition, initiate internships for students and recent graduates of library and information science.

For more information, contact Rachel Isaac-Menard at ris@architecturemps.com